OHAPTER IX.—THE EIM OF THE DAME.

After waiting six long hours.
And with monger almost deed,
News came nose nee truck was mended
And the train soon went ahead.
Soon we passed a place called Joinstown
Filled with iron femnifies,
Where the people all wore working Like a jos of busy bees.

Then we came to a great tunnel; I bear me sat a pretty miss, and when all was dark so midnight, quick from her I stells a bear. 'Oh,' she cried, the people shouted, Aud, before we reached the light, I was perfing through the window. In my seat again all right.

After passing the great tunnel,
To a piace we quickly came
Upon the highest mountain top,
And Crasson is its name;
Siany people in the summer
To this pleasant spot repair,
To enjoy fit cooling waters
And its pure, fresh mountain air At Altoons we took breakfast

At Altcome we took breakfast.

It was one chock or more;

Such a lot of hungry mortals

I now laid eyes on before;

All the good things on the table
in short time did disappear;
And they all shouting wildly—

"Quickly bring more breakfast here."
